

Raja Ampat In Technicolour

Raja Ampat, or 'Four Kings' archipelago encompasses more than 9.8 million acres of land and sea off the north-western tip of Indonesia's West Papua Province in the Coral Triangle - the heart of the world's coral reef biodiversity. Regular contributor Jim Anderson visited Raja Ampat earlier this year, his stunning photographs show the seas around Raja probably hold the rich

Soft corals and reef fish at Api Box dive site to the south of Gam Island

Lauriea siagiani in a barrell sponge at Gam Island

Unidentified shrimp on a sea fan

Mandarin fish, Synchiropus splendidus, at dusk at Aer borei Jetty in 6m

Pygmy Sea Horse, Hippocampus bargibanti
1 of 12 on a sea fan at 15m

An unknown goby in its discarded bottle home below Aer borei Jetty

Manta birostris at Aer Borei reefs

Jorunna funebris, Kabui Strait

Porcellanella triloba crab on a sea pen during a night dive

Hypselodoris bullocki, Kabui Strait

Chromodoris fidelis, Kabui Strait

Pseudosimnia punctata on soft coral in the Kabui Strait

Crinoid starfish Mios Kon, Kri Island

Colonial sea squirt

Periclimenes amboinensis on crinoid

Amphiprion ocellaris in host anemone